Physical Description: an installation of printed images, box, desk, and chair of collected facebook posts

Project Description:

This piece takes into account my twenty-four hour a day online environment, ideas of a social network and curated lists of images, posts, friends, likes and such. In this "field of dreams," we have built it, they have come, but we don't know the game or the rules yet. To best engage the content of this work, a chair has been provided. The nature of this work is based in making a collection or archive of ephemeral materials. Even the most critical posts might seem to be there and gone in moments leaving what seems to be no trace. This body of work represents a different quality of activity in finding and making something out what most think was just a transitory space between something and nothing.
